WHAT RADICALISM DID HERE.

Haddenish again asks the people North Carolina to surrender the State to its control. Already nominations have been made for all the offices of the Exec ntive Reportment, and the counties will soon be astir with Conventions to nomibers to the Legislature. The the it solicits are of the most im portage maracter. They involve the high-est property, liberty, life, and all that imparts value to either. Un der our form of government, this attitude of Redicalism is more than a solicitation; it is a declaration that if its principles and methods be brought to the standard of the Constitution and Laws, it will bear the test and command popular approval and support. It calls upon the people to try it by that standard. It is proposed now to accept the challenge thus chrown down, and in a brief review of the record of that party in this State to see how far these pretensions are borne out by its past history here.

When the civil war broke out the opinion at the North became general that the power conferred by the Constitution upon the Federal Government was unequal to the exigencies then existing and the further strain which the war would involve It was determined, therefore, to set the Constitution aside until the restoration of peace. Upon this principle the Federal Government acted from the beginning to the end of the strife. In its prosecution o the war every principle of civil liberty was violated: the Secretary of State made it a matter of boast that the liberty of every citizen within the States of the then Union was at his mercy. If any man raised a voice of protest against the government he was committed to one of the many Bastilles with which the Northern States abounded : if the press demurred, it was silenced. At the end of the war all power was concentrated in Congress. The co-ordinate branches bent unresistingly to its sway. The successor of President LINCOLN ventured to act upon what he and his Cabinet deemed a mandate of duty under the Constitution; he was impeached, and only narrowly escaped deposition. The Supreme Court did not accede to a certain construction of the Constitution given by Congress; its voice was stifled by being overlaid by new Judges. The Congress itself was completely under the centrol of the Radical element, the principal article in the creed of which was a fierce, indiscriminate and fanatical hate of the South. How such a party should have grown up amid the furious passions engendered by civil convulsions may be understood. How such a party should expect to gain a sufficient number of adherents to divide our people, when the conditions of allegiance were hostility to their own blood and race, none who felt the power of ties like these could imagine. But it was shown in the sequel that they had not reckoned in vain.

With such a party in power, there was reason that the South should fear the utmost application of what was implied in the rule " Væ victis!" Nor was the apprehension without ground. Radicalism did not indeed shed the blood of our people after they had faid down their arms; the spirit of the age forbade that. It is long since, in any Christian country, blood was abed for political offences. They did not confiscate real estate: that was impracticable against millions of people; besides, some lingering regard for the Constitution which prohibited such a measure may have had its influence. But these things excepted, the Radical party in its proceedings against the people of the South knew from first to last neither pity nor remorse.

At the end of the war the government North Carolina was in full operation, though its officers had been dispersed by the marching in of the Federal troops, and the occupation of the Capitol. Had these officers been called to resume their functions, the government would have gone on quietly, and the country have been saved years of anarchy, misrule, ruin and suffering. But Radicalism held that the government itself was tainted with treason It demanded, therefore, that it should be torn down to the ground, and built up

According to our system, governments originate with the people; the fundamental doctrine being that all sovereignty abides in them. This sovereignty is exercised through delegates selected by the people. A Convention thus implies free, unrestricted choice as to its members; absolute discretion as to the time when it shall be held; and power without limitation. The Radical party resolved to discard all old principles and build up the State anew, not by the power of the people, but by the authority of the Federal Executive. Accordingly, the people of the State were ordered to send delegates to the Capitol on a day appointed. This mandate left us no option; for the State was then in possession of the Federal troops and there was no choice but between the existing military | the bare support of the government was government and the civil government to an intolerable oppression to our people. It be established. The convention met and fixed the Judge to one circuit, thus transheld its session. Fortunately there was ferring his private feelings and personal as yet no change as to right of suffrage. and the delegates were in the main good and able men. The ordinances were wise, and met the necessities of the situation with great judgment. The Constitution was left nearly as before. To reorganize the State the Convention ordered an election for Governor and for the Legislature. The election was held; the new Governor was installed and the Legislature met and transacted its business.

Whatever had been demanded to put the State in proper relation to the general government had now been done. After four years of war, after the painful agitations of a period when there was no government in existence, our people, having done everything that was required of them, now hoped for rest. But the boon of "domestic tranquility" was never to be enjoyed under Radical rule. The one aim of that party was by all the agencies of terrorism to subjugate the South to its support. The preceding canvass for the Legislature, the debates of its session, the tone of the Press, all breathing the manly spirit of constitutional liberty, excited alarm is the breast of the leaders of that party. Such sentiments it was believed, and justly believed, would, if unrepressed, nesult in the speedy overthrow of its ascendancy, and in the defeat of Radical aims. This state of the public mind at the South was thought to be due to what was alleged to be the mild policy pursued by the President and his Cabinet in the reorganization of this State. The Radical Congress now thoroughly exasperated against the Southern people since it had been found that they could not be made subservient to Radical aims, summarily condemned the whole proceeding and thrust it aside with contempt. Between the two factions into which the party had now split, there was no common arbiter to which appeal might be made; for both had ignored the Constitution which afforded the only standard of decision. The conflict could only be determined by the respective strength of the two factions; and in the contest the President and his supporters went to the wall. No obstruction now existed to the execution of Radical plans, however extreme.

The genius of Jacobinism never de vised a bolder scheme, or one fraught with more wrong, ruin and torture to those who were to be subjected to it. It involved the overthrow of everything in the State that was venerable, whether by its origin or by lapse of time, either in our government, its institutions, or in its society, It aimed indeed at blotting out all disinctions of society and race. As a liminary step the Reconstruction Acts were passed. In pursuance of their provisions, the State lines were obliterated. and the States themselves grouped into "Military Departments," duly numbered. Every office was vacated. In an age preeminent for the sentiment of law, the whole machinery for the preservation of the peace was stricken out of existence: not a peace officer remained within the limits of the State. A general at the head of an army took possession of the "Department," once the State of North Carolina. A military despotism, stark and stern, was established here. In seeming conformity to precedent-in every ago it has been remarked how the approaches of despotism are veiled under the forms of free institutions-a second Convention was called. It was evident that for the purposes in view, a change must be made in the system of suffrage. If free express on were given to the sentiment of our people the Constitution to be formed would differ but little, if any, from that of '65, which had been so recently adopted. There were formidable difficulties in the way of a change if the Constitution had any force. Citizenship and suffrage belonged exclusively to the States; Congress having no power except to pass uniform naturalization laws. But the Constitution had ceased to be an impediment to Radicalism, and here, as before, it was disregarded. Its plans could be carried out by disfranchisement of a large portion of the white race and the enfranchisement of the negroes. This was accordingly done. The Convention when assembled represented everything but the genius, spirit and traditions of North Carolina. A few delegates excepted, who were loyal sons of the State, it was composed of men who were aliens to our blood, bitterly hostile to us as a people, and of unknown or suspicious antecedents; of men aptly dubbed Scallawags, who in intelligence and character ranked with the lowest order in our social scale; of negroes, who in knowledge of government were on a par with our domestic animals. Under the leaders in that body the work was thorough. The Constitution of '76, under which we had lived so long and happily, was utterly demolished: there was not left one stone standing upon another. The new Constitution would have suited our people quite as well if it had been made to order in Tahiti. In its essential points, it was the antipodes of the old onc. In these points it was conformed to Centralismthe genius of Radicalism. It doubled the term of office, and so increased the power of the Executive as to make it the controlling power in the State. It multiplied offices and salaries to such an extent that relations to the judgment seat. It changed our penal code, and made the maintenance of the criminal a charge upon the public : the penitentiary—a mere seminary of crime which was then fixed upon us, costs more to maintain it than the entire revenues of the State amounted to within the memory of men yet living. It destroyed all moral distinctions in regard to citizenship; the convicted felon and the most blameless citizen were invested with equal right to suffrage. These specifications must suffice, for the only object here is to exhibit the spirit of that instrument and the animus of its framers. The Constitution was submitted to those who were permitted to vote upon it, and by them ratified in April, 1868. Had not mind, education, patriotism, everything that civilization elerishes, been put under the ban in North Carolina, it would have been rejected with scorn. Again an election was held to launch

he State under the Radical regime. State officers. Judges and county officers, were elected. The result was a complete revolution, involving measureless degradation to the State. In the general wreck the Supreme Court fared comparatively well. The majority of the Judges, in learning and ability, were not unworthy of their position. Our charitable institutions were fortunate; both were well managed, one of them with exceptional talent and skill. In all other respects the condition of the State was deplorable. The State offices were filled by men, of some of whom it would be charity to say that they had not one qualification for office. The incumbent of one of them was charged, upon strong evidence, with peculation. The incumbent of another was known to live in an atmosphere of infamy. Men were elevated to the Circuit Bench who might fearlessly challenge investigation as possessing every disqualification. Some were acquainted only with the mere rudiments of their profession; some added to this ignorance a yet grosser ignorance of their own language; some were destitute of character. In a great part of our State the Superior Court fell into contempt. Some of our railroads were placed under the control of men, the most of whom in their management displayed perfidy and corruption without bound. Of our Senators it is sufficient to say that one of them-a native of the State-avowed upon the floor of the Senate that though he had acted with the "rebels" his purpose all the while was to embarrass—to betray?—the cause in which were embarked the fortunes and the lives of the people of his State. Our Congressional Representatives were, with scarcely an exception, mean in intellect and in attainments; some were without principle. The Representative from Wake District, I'ke GARFIELD, bartered his votes for money: resigned his seat; and now lives in opulence in one of the Western States upon his ill-gotten gains. The whole Congressional delegation actively cooperated with the bitterest enemies of the South in traducing and maligning our people. The office of Justice of the Peace was fill d by negroes and scallawags, who were in nine cases out of ten alike ignorant of the law and the language in which it was written. The coarse manners, the brutal ignorance, the gross partiality, the unblushing venality, of these magistrates' courts excited general amazement and horror. Rights were abandoned which had to be prosecuted in such tribunals. Except the Supreme Court, men fled from the Courts rather than resorted to them to obtain their

JUDGE BUXTON, we hear, is in th nabit of telling the people to whom he reads his speech that he learned his polities from the old Fayetteville Observer. and that he cannot change the impressions made by our teachings upon his youthful mind while he sat, another SAUL at the feet of another GAMALIEL. There is something radically wrong about Judge Buxton's memory, as about his politics. The Fayetteville Observer was a Whigh newspaper until the war obliterated party lines and names, and years before the war Judge Buxton had abandoned the Whig party with which in his earlier youth he had been connected. But there were Whigs and Whigs; and the Fayetteville Observer, even while Judge BUXTON called himself a Whig, enjoyed his active though (it is scarcely necessary to say) not open hostility. Its ways were never his ways, and with a natural inclination to butting he was always butting against it Has the Judge forgotten the result of his last Whig butting against the Fayetteville Observer? There was a laugh about it in those old days when a Cumberland farmer, who knew the Judge's general inclination to butting and had watched this particular indulgence in it, said that the butting goat had been cured. The way of it, he said, was somehow so: the goat butted at every thing that wore a hat. To break him, the farmer fixed a crow-bar in the logs of his barn and put an old hat on the crow-bar. As soon as the goat saw t'ie hat he measured off the distance and went full drive at it, expecting to find a man under it. The crow-bar went in at one end of the goat and out at the other. The cure was final.

THE Tribune says that we Southern folk are a worthless lot of "idle" people who "don't want to work," who "won' work," and who don't deserve any help from the Federal Government! This sort of talk is laughable. The idle people of the South raised plenty to eat last year and furnished nearly half the exports of the whole United States in the one item of cotton. The cotton crop last year was 5,000,000 bales, the largest ever raised, and it is estimated that this year's crop will exceed last year's very considerably. In the last fifteen years the cotton crop has yielded at the ports of shipment an ag gregate of $4,000,000,000 in gold, paying the cultivators an average of $60 a bale, or $3,500,000,000.

"FIFTEEN YEARS have gone over the South since the war." says the New York Tribune, "and she sits still crushed, wretched, busy displaying and bemoaning her wounds." If the Tribune had not been established by that wickedest wicked editors, HORACE GREELEY, and its whole course governed by his instructions ever since his death, we should be surprised at such a statement. It was only the other day that we reprinted from the Tribune a letter from one of its staff describing his trip a few years ago over the then war-wasted South and contrasting what he saw then with the present "smil ing villages, well-dressed people, cheerful faces and well-cultivated farms" along his route. "Not a trace of war remained."

THE STATE OF MAINE has only in creased 12,000 in population since 1870 less than two-tenths of one per cent. As, according to President HAYES, mischieve ous politics is at the bottom of this slow growth, may we ask who is to blame?

nt in North Carolina writes to ask me. 'Has Everett's Oration on Washington ever been published? I heard Mr. E. deliver it in Raleigh, and in truth it was an oration. But fine as it was, there were no passages in it which equaled in grace and beauty the few sentences in which Mr Badger introduced him to the audience. It was never my good fortune to see or hear Mr. Everett, but I saw and heard Mr. Badger welcome Mr. Clay to North Carolina when he entered Raleigh in April, 1844, and a more finished specimer of oratory, in appearance, manner and matter. it has never been my good fortune to hear. Of course it was very brief, only "a few sentences," as in the case of Mr. Everett's introduction, but it was exactly enough—a few sentences more or less might have marred its symmetry and beauty I often heard Mr. Badger, and he was the greatest orator, as he was the most admirable conversationalist, that I ever knew If I were to ask my old, excellent pastor in Fayetteville, he would probably say that the most eloquent specimen of oratory that he ever heard, was that portion of Mr Badger's defence of the late Wake county Senator, Samuel Whitaker, thirty or forty years ago, where he described what in his view was "Christian charity," the case being one in which Mr. Whitaker, who for many years ran a wagon team between Raleigh and Fayetteville, was charged by brother Methodist with "capturing," a the Yankees would have called it, a sack of salt (I think it was,) belonging to one of his consignors, which salt was accidentally lost or delivered to the wrong person. I don't know what Mr. Everett thought or said of Mr. Badger's introduction of him on the occasion alluded to by my friend but I have heard that as to Mr. George Davis's introduction of him when he delivered the same Washington oration in Wilmington, he said that Mr. Davis was his equal as an orator. I have no doubt of it; and so he found two equals, or superiors, in his own line in North Carolina. But I must not forget to say, that the Washington oration was never published eparately, but is embraced in one of the four octavo volumes of Everett's Speeches

Last Spring seven capitalists of this city and Chicago attempted to make "a corner in wheat, and for that purpose bought up sixteen millions of bushels to hold for rise. The speculation has just come to grief, the parties closing out with a loss of several millions of dollars, one-half of the loss being sustained by the millionaire, Mr. Jas. R. Keene, who is abundantly able to lose it. Many years ago, when "corners" were not talked of but were sometimes put in practical operation, a New York correspondent of my excellent old friend, that admirable merchant and Christian gentleman, the late Charles T. Haigh, proposed to the latter to buy up and hold on specuarticle-corn, or flour or bacon, perhapsbut Mr. Haigh, though admitting that money might be made by the operation. declined it, for the reason that the article was one of the necessaries of life, and he had ever made it a rule not to hoard any of them. It Mr. Keene had read his Bible with as much attention and profit as Mr. Haigh did, he would have seen that there is no promise to him that "withholdeth the corn," and would thus have been a richer man to-day than he is.

A friend having invited me to take ride on Friday afternoon, he brought out one of his family horses, a handsome and gentle six-year-old bay, which could go his mile in three and a half minutes, and drove me from his house on Brooklyn Heights. to and through Prospect Park, and thence along the grand boulevard to Coney Island It would not be easy to describe the beauty of this drive, the late rains having given the grass and foliage the richest emerald tint. Brooklyn's Prospect Park is naturally more beautiful than New York's Central, but art has done less for it. Coney Island has taken many leaps in the way of improvement since I was there last year. There were many thousands of visitors, as usual, though Saturday and Sunday are the great days. After night, what between its music and the magnificent fire-works at Brighton Beach Hotel, nearly all the Island congregated in its front, and it was a sight indeed. A vast deal of eating and drinking was done of course, but such a thing as rude or disorderly person was neither seen nor heard of. At half past nine we started back, passing many carriages, and I got home at midnight, having ridden about thirty miles and spent three or four hours at Coney Island. On Saturday afternoon a party of six of us, all North Carolinians, went to the new watering place, Long Beach, which it is expected will be equal to Coney Island; but I would not be tempted to go there again through the dreadful stench in and about Hunter's Point, where we took the Long Island Railroad. There are, however, other routes which avoid this nuisance. The road is very rough and the distance twenty miles. There is an immense hotel, and sixteen cottages for private families, and it is intended to have two hundred and fifty of these. The ocean view is very extensive, the bathing fine but there were comparatively few persons there, perhaps a thousand or two.

What will our North Carolina farmers say to a farm of 36,000 acres, in Dakotah Territory, of which 24,000 acres in wheat and 12,000 acres in oats? The wheat will average eighteen bushels, it is said.

A London correspondent of the World gives a long and interesting history of the Coutts family, in connection with the marriage which is to take place on Tuesday of that rich old maid the Baroness Bur dett-Coutts, aged 67, to Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, aged 29, a native of Philadel phia, but a naturalized citizen of England, who has been for some years her private secretary—what relation he will sustain to her after marriage remains to be seen But, then, her ancestors have been noted for such strange matrimonial alliances, no one of which appears to have been happy. Her grandfather, the founder of the house and of the great Coutts bank, was married three times, first to a pretty housemaid whom he fell in love with, had educated and then married; then his second wife who died an infirm old woman; whereupon Boston Saturday. died, in 1822, leaving her many millions of dollars and the bank. Growing old, she married the Duke of St. Albans, who was 27. She gave him large sums of money, but very little of her time, which was devoted to her bank. And thus it seems that there is such a thing as heredity in marrying, as well as in other things. Having no child of her own, Mrs. Coutts left the bank and her millions, not to the Duke, her husband, but to a grand-daughter of her first husband, old Thomas Coutts, that is, to the old maid who is now

LILESVILLE, August 16. EDITOR NEWS :- Right gracefully, one August morning thirty years ago, my left hand rested on the margin of a blackboard over there in the East building at Chape Hill, whilst my right so deftly chalked of solutions of very intricate geometrical problems that classmates were astonished. side glance at the "Tute" now and then revealed to me a smile on his rather uncomely phiz, which I was glad enough to interpret as one of approval. On rattled the work, until at last 'twas finished; and then serenely said he, "Mr. Outis, your figures are correct, but I mark this recitation of yours as a failure;

Soon afterwards they shipp-ed me. In fact the place was too small for my vaulting ambition and the faculty thought I'd better leave. My paternal ancestor concurred with them as the "crap was smartly Battle, and he is President of the University, and he is as genial and full of life and energy as in the days gone by. Nothing better was ever done for the educational interests of the State, or for the renown and credit of our grand and honored old University than his selection as President. And I said "words to that effect" a long time ago-before his name was publicly mentioned elsewhere in connection with the office-as the files of the Wilmington Journal of 187- will show.

A physician of complete education and many years practice and experience, lately said to me that uterine diseases had in creased and multiplied more rapidly during the last fifteen years than ever before: tha more females were now suffering, and in curably and hopelessly suffering, than ever in the history of the medical and surgical profession. And he said this was entirely attributable to the introduction and general use of sewing machines and church and home organs and melodeous, which are "run" by foot, leg, thigh and hip power. Maybe I write too plainly; possibly use words not recognizable in polite and cultured society, but I only "tell the tale as 'twas told me"-and wish that some one may invent a machine which will "run, and tuck, and fell," and not transmute, and reverse, and tergiversate, and place wrong end-foremost what Ellzabeth Tilton said to the saintly Brother Beecher. PROBATE BUSINESS .- Yesterday Judge D. Upchurch received for probate the last will and testament of the late A. W. Lawrence, with Major W. W. Vass and W. W. Smith as executors; also the last will and testament of Wesley Hartsfield, deceased, of Wake county, naming Jacob A. Hartsfield, as executor.

AT THE CAPITOL.—"It never rains but pours," is an old adage, but not so good one as that "when a drought comes it generally general." Our perambulations and around the State house and grounds esterday was unsuccessful. Not a thing was to be had. The entire building seemed permeated with a dullness well calculated give one the blues.

Good Lungs.—A colored man who had rtaken of too much stagger-juice yestery evening was lodged in the station use, and when the key was turned he up a better shouting than was ever ard at a camp meeting. For two long ours the howlings of this "one more unrtunate" made night hideous until. completely exhausted, he played out.

BURGLARY.—On Sunday night last the use of Capt. George Waitt was entered and his pocket-book from his pocket at the foot of the bed was taken. His wife's trunk was opened and a lot of silk handkerchiefs taken therefrom. They then passed from Capt. Waitt's bedroom to the parlor and turned things up generally, carrying off a silver cup. This we get from Capt. Waitt himself, who also says that the that three suspicious persons boarded his train last night, getting on at different places, but who seemed to know one another very well, all getting off at this place. They walked up town. Let all suspicious persons be asked to explain their business, and if not satisfactory passed out the city

MAYOR'S COURT.-Mayor Manly yes terday began business with an affray; the participants not being ready for trial it was postponed.

A case of assault and battery next oc-cupied his attention but he and the party defendant were of the same opinion. Submitted, fined and taxed the costs.

Then came the case of the quintette who amused themselves rocking the excursion train Sunday night. Ed. Sorrell. and Robt. Fowler, white, Walter Edgerton, William Sandford and Sid Hinton. colored, were brought up to the bar. An examination acquitted Ed. Sorrell and William Sandford, while the other three were adjudged guilty and held to bail to appear before the next term of the Superior Court. Fowler succeded in giving his bond and Sid Hinton and Walter Edgerton were sent to jail. There is a special act of the Legislature dealing with such cases and it is a pity they cannot be tried before the present presiding Judge.

WAKE SUPERIOR COURT.-Judge Graves opened the court yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock, and the following business was disposed of:

By order of Raleigh Township Execuive Committee.

R. S. DUNN, Chairman. H. H. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

OPEN GATES.—Why not make it a capital offence for one to leave a gate unlocked, which, when open, gets half way across the sidewalk? Our pavements are mostly darkened by shade trees, and of a dark night, to be hurriedly proceeding home, a fellow suddenly comes to a dead halt by a gate striking him all the way from his shins to his moustache, he is just bound to cuss. But why cuss the gate? If the owner would come out and get his share it would be some relief, but such is not the case, and the poor fellow can only limp on to the next gate to get another thump. Citizens, if your gates won't stay fastened please hang a lamp on them.

FUNERAL.—The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. O'Neil were conducted by Rev. Father J. B. White at St. John's Roman Catholic Church vesterday morning. The services were very solemn and impressive, and the good Father's remarks upon the occasion were feeling and instructive. The body was taken from the church to the Catholic Cemetery east of Raleigh and there interred. The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Cayton, Jas. P. Hayes, James Doyle, C. J. Friel, N. Plumadore and Alex. Pluma-

WHY?-Why is it that Nash Square does not assume an appearance of a park Why are the entrances to the Square nailed up? It was leased for the purpose of being made a convenient, pleasant place for our citizens to enjoy an evening in such way as not to injure the lessee, but now people living on either side are prevented passing through to and from their homes. Nor does it look so much like a resort now as it did before it was leased. Will the gates be nailed up when the circus pitches ts tents?

AN IMPROVEMENT.—The cellar due out so many years ago opposite the old Law Building as the basement to the Ma-sonic temple is being hidden from view by the erection of a mammoth bill board by Messrs. Bryan & Mullen, bill posters. Show bills will be a great relief to those who pass the corner of Davie and Fayetteville streets daily. The board is built in anticipation of the advent of old John Robinson's advance couriers, who are heading for this point.

COLLECTIONS.—Revenue collections vesterday for the Fourth Collection District amounted to $106.50.

GLEANINGS FROM STATE EXCHANGES.

The Winston Leader notes the death in that town on Friday last of Dr. H. W. Bynum, a much esteemed citizen, aged about 60 years. Also, the death in Salem on Saturday of one of its oldest citizens, Mr. Martin Cloud, aged 85 years.

The Charlotte Observer says that the first bale of new North Carolina cotton came from under the very shadow of the mountains. It was raised in Cleveland county and sold in Shelby on Monday at the extraordinary price of 15½ cents per pound. Early cotton is not unusual in Cleveland: almost the first bale sold last year, was bought in the Shelby market.

The Surry Visitor says that Mt. Airy had last week the most disastrous wind and hail storm ever witnessed by the oldest inhabitant "in this county. Many of the hail stones were as large as a hen's egg, barrels of which could have been taken up in many places. The tobacco crop is totally ruined, being literally beaten to fragments by the hail, and the damage to the corn crop cannot be estimated. The farmers are greatly agitated over their misfor-

The New York Herald says that Major Moore's History of North Carolina is "on the whole a creditable production. It is a literary monument, of which neither the author nor the people of whom he writes have any reason to be ashamed. Mr. Moore's method is exceedingly simple. There is no attempt at philosophy, no effort after high art, nothing that can be called peculiar. Adopting the chronological meth od, he leads us step by step down through the revolving years from the time of the discovery to 1876, noting the principal events as they occur, and giving us graphic sketches and many interesting reminiscences of the leading personages who have been conspicuous in the State at different periods of its history, and who have helped to make North Carolina what it has long been-a proud and prominent member of the Commonwealth.

STATE POLITICAL NOTES:-

The Magnolia Democratic Club was entertained on Saturday last by excellent speeches from Messrs. J. W. Powell and D. B. Nicholson. Several new members were received and arrangements made for a Hancock and Jarvis pole and flag.

The Prosperity of the South.

[From the Baltimore Sun.!

The South can afford to let the partisan politicians misrepresent and malign her, for she is able to stand alone and attend to her own business. The census shows that she is rapidly gaining in the best sort of population by the influx of sturdy, hardworking pioneers from the North and West, as well as from Europe. She had no part nor lot in the tremendous "land grab," by means of which the West and Northwest were not only reticulated over with a comprehensive railroad system, but landed territory was lavished upon these sections such as enable 1 them to offer irresistible inducements to foreign immigration; yet, nevertheless, the railroads of the South have been repaired, consolidated, extended and multiplied in such a way as to afford ample, cheap and convenient facilities for transportation, and the best sort of stimulus to the development of agriculture and manufactures. Her great staples, cotton, tobacco, sugar and rice, have resumed their commanding positions in the aggregate of the world's indispensable products, and now yield crops greater than ever before, while greater attention to diversified husbandry is teaching her people their ability to feed and clothe and supply themselves, thus giving them all the profits realized upon their leading crops to be applied to their own uses Her mineral resources are also being de veloped most rapidly, cotton mills, furnaces and forges are erecting in many sections, there is a new spirit of thrift and enterprise observable among nearly all classes, attended with that more uniform distribution of wealth which is the accepted sign of a happy people. Under such circumstances the outcry of the politicians against the South is recognized to be "a vain thing," the more so from the fact that it will not be heard any more after November.

Irish Prosperity.

[From the New York Times.] The Irish papers relate that when the landlord of an estate in Leinster remonstrated with one of his tenants who had combined with others to avoid payment of rent, he was answered: "Well, yez know I can't pay the rint, but if you're anyways short I'll lend ye the money and be to yez!" The story sounds like one of those invented to illustrate or point a moral, but when read in the light of the report of Irish savings on the 1st of last month it seems more likely to be true. Indisputable figures show that there has been an actual increase since June 30, 1879, of £76,000 (on a gross total of £30,000,000) in the investments in Government and India stock, and in the Post Office saving Murder in Lincoln County.

[Correspondence of the New York Herald,].

LINCOLNTON, N. C., August 11, 1880. —A most horrible tragedy was enacted in this quiet interior town last night. Joe Roark, a colored man, going home to his family after his day's work was done, was brutally assassinated on one of our most public streets within one hundred vards of the Court House. The deed was done about 9 o'clock at night, just before the moon had gone down. Joe lives in the eastern part of the village, and was within a short distance of his humble home, when he was met by another colored man, whom he did not recognize, but to whom he spoke a pleasant "Good evening," to which no response was made, save that just after the man had passed Joe, a pistol was discharged and Roark fell, pierced in the centre of his back by a ball. His screams for help seemed to give an impetus to the murderous purpose of the assassin, who immediately snapped his pistol a second time, exploding the cap, but failing to ignite the powder so as to discharge the chamber of his pistol. Thus finding this effort a failure, the murderer dealt several sure blows with his pistol upon the head of his victim, fracturing his skull on the right side for the space of ten inches along the base of the brain.

ARREST OF THE MURDERER. A number of citizens quickly gathered and in a short time a warrant was procured and John Morris, colored, was ar rested and committed to jail to await the result of the wounds inflicted upon Roark. There is naturally much indignation felt by our citizens, except among the colored people. The latter, with a few honorable exceptions, sympathize with the accused.

MOTIVE FOR THE DEED. A short while before the last term o our Superior Court Joe Roark was arrested for stealing cotton from a manufac turer near this town. Joe was allowed bail, and when the time had arrived for the preliminary examination he had departed for parts unknown. After a while ne wearied of his self-imposed expatriation, voluntarily returned to Lincolnton and made a clean breast of the cotton stealing, which resulted in the arrest and indictment of John Morris and others. Of the parties implicated one absconded before he could be arrested, and four were taken. At the last term of our Superior Court the case was continued by the defendants on affidavit, bail was allowed and John Morris and another were relieved from confinement upon their giving security for their appearance at the next October term of the court; two of the accused were left, and are still in jail. John Morris remained in Lincolnton; the other man out on bail suddenly disappeared and is said now to be in New York city. Joe Roark was the only witness against John Morris and his confederates. Threats and every other means had recently been employed to frighten Joe into a second flight, but neither threats against his life nor false whisperings of warrants for other crimes availed any in this strait the deed of marder was done, and the other accomplices in the cotton stealing will escape, in all human probability; but John Morris will most probably be hanged for murder.

Pablts of Esthetics.

The favorite standpoint of the male esthetic is the chimney-piece for this attitude: Lean the elbow on the chimneypiece. Turn back the open hand so that it may comfortably support the side of the jaw. The head is thus thrown back, and the nose is well in the air. It is one of the first lessons to be learned by the novice in aestheticism to wear the nose thus. The back is slightly bent, and one leg is gracefully curled round the other. The thinner the legs the better. The æsthetic lady begins by getting her chair close to the wall. and then sinks into it sideways in such a way that her draperies leave the outline of her figure plainly visible. Then she leans her head against the wall, making the throat as long and the back of the neck as short as possible. Next she stretches her arms to their utmost length and crosses her hands so that the fingers droop in a lank, dejected outstretched way over her knees. Having completed her attitude, her immobility must strike outsiders as something to be wondered at, and she must remain thus for an hour at a time.

Regarding Valises. [From the Little Rock Gazette.] "Well, I was speaking about valises. Several days ago I took a trip from Little Rock. I had a small valise. In the hurry of getting ready for the journey I only put one shirt, a collar and a revolver in the thing. As usual, I saw a dozen men with valises like mine. At night the crowd of valises must have got mixed up, for a man took my valise and left one exactly like it. I chuckled as I thought of the man's coming surprise, and rather longed for a chance to open the leather receptacle that had been left for me. I didn't dare open it on the train, fearing that some one would notice my surprise. When the train stopped for supper I went around to the back of the house and opened up."

"What did it contain? "Nothing but a long bowie-knife and tin cup. Any man who swaps valises will get cheated. Next day another change was made. The contents of the valise that fell to me were a baby apron, a bottle of salts and a shoemaker's hammer. If the world will listen to a suggestion, the man with a valise will stop traveling.

Life's Disappointments.

It happened last year. She had a perfect inspiration about a dress. Only one woman in the metropolis could carry it out. But was she to be trusted? Well, it must be risked, for no one else could do it. Madame Mantua promises the strictest secrecy, but, being an artist, cannot keep to herself her enthusiasm about this most poetic of costumes. It was an idyl, a fugue, a sonata. The evening came on which the dress was to be worn; the delightful owner struggled up the stairs and advanced to greet her hostess to behold her in a fac simile of the dress she has on. Words are powerless to depict her agony of mind, increased by the observations of banks there has been an increase of £77,000. That is doing pretty well for a people reputed the reverse of frugal, and in a one or two intimates, "Oh, your dress is exactly like Mrs. ——'s. How lovely it is!" Like Mrs. ——'s, when the idea was entirely her own. It was hard.

A Submarine Discovery.

[From the New York Herald.] The officers of the Coast Survey an nounce the discovery of a submarine plateau under the Gulf Stream off Charleston the existence of which had not been suspected, but which must exert an important offuence on the Gulf Stream temperature and also on the climate of our Southern seaboard. In running a line of deep sea dredgings off Charleston Commander Bartlett was recently surprised to find in the axis of the great stream depths of from 233 to 450 fathoms only, where it was thought they would range from 600 to 1,000 fathoms. This "swell of land" rising from the Atlantic bottom was found stretching eastward 150 miles between the parallels of 32 and 321 degrees, at the northeastern terminus of which the depth of water suddenly increased from about 450 to 1,386 fathoms. The submerged ridge projecting from the Carolina coast must obviously serve as a fender or bar to deflect from our Southern seaboard the underflow of Arctic water

coming from Newfoundland, and, by forcing the glacial stream far to the eastward, it

thus allows the great "river in the sea" to retain its tropical heat, unreduced by commixture with the polar undercurrent, all the way from the Gulf to Charleston. This inference from the recent coast survey soundings is confirmed by the temperatures of the Gulf Stream on the Admiralty chart. which shows a decided cooling of the stream after it passes north of Charleston, and also what is more remarkable, that in Septem ber (when the ocean is at its warmest) the stream is warmer between Charleston and the Florida Channel than it is even in the Gulf itself. The peculiar topography of the Atlantic bottom off the Carolina coast, it would seem, explains also the fact which has lately excited much surprise, that the immense June flow of ice-bearing water from Newfoundland made no impression on the temperature of the Southern seaboard. The summer of 1875, like that of 1880, opened with an exceptionally large number of ice-bergs moving off the coast southward; but, contrary to popular opinion, these ice masses, and the swollen polar stream that bore them, had no effect in lowering the air temperatures from Nantucket to Florida. Could the icy water have surged up against the shore a different result would have been felt We may therefore conclude that not only off Charleston, but possibly off Cape Cod also, there exists a submarine barrie projecting out into the Atlantic, intercepting the volume of heavy glacial water moving southwestwardly over the sea bed and thus securing throughout summer the extraordinarily high temperature of eighty degrees, which is observed in the western edge of the Gulf Stream all the way from Cape Hatteras up to Nantucket Shoals.

As these invisible features of the ocean floor off our coasts have an important bearing on the sea temperature and climate of the numerous seaside resorts from Cape Cod to Cape Hatteras, their accurate exploration is of growing interest and should be made complete.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS:-

During the year ending June 30, 1880 the net imports of gold into the United States amounted to $77,153,331, a larger gain than ever before in the history of this country. During the same time more silver was exported than was imported.

The commercial reports of the leading cities indicate very clearly a large and prosperous fall trade. The opinion is that business risks have been reduced to a minimum, and that credits are established on a sound and healthy basis. The New York Economist in its review says that the country has entered at last on a condition of unprecedented prosperity.

If the new Spanish royal baby should be a male he will probably be christened Philip or Ferdinand. If a female she will be named Isabella. For godfathers Pope Leo and the Emperor of Austria are mentioned; for godmothers, Queen Isabella and the Archduchess. The health of the young Queen is quite satisfactory.

The census returns, as completed, give the State of South Carolina a total population of 981,402, an increase of 295,279 or more than forty-three per cent. since the census of 1870. The increase is largely nominal. The census of 1870 was of purpose, and through ignorance of enumerators grossly defective throughout the South. The men who took it were often utterly ignorant of either of the three r's.

They are getting politics somewhat mixed up in Massachusetts. A club of independent Republicans has been organized in Boston, with ex-Collector Simmons as President, and they declare for Hancock for President and Butler for Governor. It is announced that General Butler will support Hancock as an independent, without putting himself in full fellowship with the Democratic party, and it is confidently expected that the Democrats will support him for Governor without putting themselves in full fellowship with Butler.

Napoleon B. Arthur deserted his wife and family at Marysville, Ohio, twenty years ago, to elope with a neighbor's daughter. His wife remained on the farm, and reared their children, while he wandered about the country. A poor, broken old tramp presented himself recently at the homestead. This was the wreck of the husband and father. He begged for food and lodging, expressing the utmost contri-tion for his bad behavior. The wife acted with promptness. She set the dog on him, and he barely escaped with his life.

It may or not have been male matter but it was mailed to the other world. The Columbus Times says that on Wednesday morning, about daylight, as Andrew Jackson, the mail rider, was about leaving for Americus, he heard a noise under the seat of his buggy. Thinking it was a chicken. he reached under to get it out, when to his astonishment he discovered a new-born baby alive and kicking. It was perfectly nude, and proved to be a full-blooded ne gro. It died about ten o'clock. After some inquiry the inhuman mother was found and arrested.

They have had a "Southern outrage over in South Carolina. Last week a meeting was held at Coosawhatchie by the Republican voters of Beaufort and Hampton counties. There was a gathering of the worst elements of a corrupt and desperate party, and the incendiary utterances of the speakers were defiant of decency and subversive of law. The fiery harangues of the speakers and the mean whisky of the manipulators of the Radical campaign drove their ignorant followers wild and moved them to acts of lawlessness and derperation. At this unlucky moment a colored man, quietly standing on the outskirts of the crowd, respectfully listening to what was being said, was assaulted by the furious mob and well nigh killed. It was Balaam White, and his only ofassailants were Republicans! This shows what Radical tolerance means. The unfortunate man was present simply as a spectator. He did not ask to "divide time." His fault was that his skin was black while his politics were Democratic.

OBITUARY NOTES:-

The death is announced, in a dispatch from London, of that venerable peer, Viscount Stratford de Redeliffe, who has been called the father of the British Diplomatic Corps, at the advanced age of 92 years.

He entered the diplomatic service in 1814. Miss Lilian Neilson, the actress, whose career is familiar to all lovers of the drama, died vesterday at Paris. Her death was very sudden, although scarcely, perhaps, entirely unexpected; for it has been a familiar fact among those who knew her well that she was subject to seizures of heart disease.

Marshal Bazaine, whose death is announced at the age of 69 years, commanded the French when they occupied Mexico for Maximilian, and also commanded at Metz, which after a siege of seven weeks capitulated, and three Marshale, fifty Generals, more than 6,000 officers, and 173,000 men were surrendered to Prince Frederic Charles, of Prussia. For this act Marshal Bazaine incurred the indignation of the whole French people, was tried and imprisoned. Escaping, he has since lived at Madrid.

The other morning a Galveston merchant was seen standing in his store with his face tied up and smiling like a house on fire. What are you grinning for?" asked a passer-by. "I choost sold out all mine old umprellas, and I feel so glad ash never vash. Dish rainy vedder was a plessing." What's the matter with your jaw?" "My tooths ache so pad I vants to die. Dot rainy vedder always makes dot," and as his thoughts went back to the sale of the umbrellas he put his hand up to his jaw and laughed, and swore, and stamped, and smiled, until people passing mistook him for a lunatic.

RALEIGH, N. C. GILDERSLEEVE'S

LATIN SERIES. BY-B. L. Gildersleeve, Ph. D., Gottingen LL.D., Professor of Greek in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Rarely have text-books been greeted with so large a measure of favor and hearty appreciation, as these books by Professor Gildersleeve have received from the best scholastic and educational minds of the country. The author, now of national reputation as a scholar, has had very complete preparation for such a work. After being graduated at Princeton, he studied for several years in the Universities of Germany, where he received his Ph.D., etc., with highest honors. His subsequent life has been devoted to teaching and linguistic study. When the new and richly endowed Johns Hopkins University sought for a fit man for its chair of Greek, the appointment was conferred on Prof. Gildersleeve, after wide conference, and without his solicitation or effort, and his work as senior professor of the University attracts marked attention. He is also the presiding officer of the American Philogical Association.

Prof. Gildersleeve's Latin books are the product of this order of ability and educational training. Embedding the best results of the second.

duct of this order of ability and educational training. Embodying the best results of recent studies in Latin philology, they are simple, clear and practical in method.

THE LATIN PRIMER,

complete in itself, a naturally developed course for beginners, at once holds the interest of the pupil, and prepares him thoroughly for ready and intelligent use of Grammar and Reader, or Latin author. It supplies: "Maximum of Forms; Minimum of Syntax; Early, Contact with the Language in Mass."

Forms; Minimum of Syntax; Early Contact with the Language in Mass."

A teacher in one of the leading High Schools of the country, who conducted a large class through this book, writes:

"We have just finished the Primer, having spent upon it thirty-four weeks; and I have been trying to realize my pupils' attitude towards the study, as compared with that of other classes I have known. They have the use of a larger vocabulary; their text-book has secured for them a careful drill in the normal terminations; they have been brought more into contact with the language in the concrete, and have, therefore, a more vivid interest in it; and they have been less perplexed by exceptional forms and difficult construction.

"The book is thoroughly alive, and will perforce make its students so."

is marked by its genuine scholarship, clear and logical arrangement of material, and a typography that pleasantly aids the aye. Its presentation of forms is plain and convenient; its definitions, rules and other statements are orief and pointed; and its translations of illustrative examples are most striking models for students.

THE LATIN READER has Fables and Stories; "De Gestis Alexandri," a most interesting narrative, chiefly from Curtius; one book of Cæsar's "De Bello Gallico," treated in a manner to make it an admirable drill in Latin Syntax; also notes and Beerences to the Grammar, and a Vocabulary.

THE LATIN EXERCISE-BOOK a book of Latin Composition, compact in form, is noticeable for its well-graded course of exercises, apt choice of idioms, and adaptation to train the average learner to a thorough mastery of the words and constructions of the language. Single specimen copies for examination furnished on receipt of the following prices:

WATSON'S NEW SERIES

The lower numbers of this reading series are remarkable for the "word-building system," the high order of the illustrations, and the interesting but strictly progressive character of the reading lessons. The higher volumes challenge comparison on account of their elecutionary treatises and the noble range of selection from standard literature.
